

Requisition

First Time Water Supply to New or Existing Development

Watermains are pipes that distribute water to a number of buildings in an area and are the responsibility of Northern Ireland Water. If you are constructing more than one property and these are not adjacent to an existing watermain, it is likely that you will need to requisition a new watermain prior to applying for water connections. If existing watermains cross your site, or are within 4 m of a proposed construction, they may need to be diverted.
